Day 1

Should schools and lawmakers do more to protect kids from cyberbullies?

Cyberbullying involves the use of communication technologies such as e-mails, cell phones and social networking sites to send hostile or derogatory messages or even obscene photos with the intent of harassing or harming the reputation of another person. Teenagers are particularly susceptible to cyberbullying because of their increasing reliance on cell phones and computers for social networking. The psychological damage inflicted by cyberbullying can be just as severe as--and
